

RSE DD

Enjeux éthiques et interdisciplinarité - Comprendre et appliquer l'éthique dans les affaires

Transcription en anglais - extrait vidéo – The Good Place (Season 3 Episode 5 'Jeremy Bearimy')

Ce cours vous est proposé par Samuel MERCIER, Professeur en Sciences de Gestion, IAE Dijon et par AUNEGe, l'Université Numérique en Économie Gestion.

(Chidi) - ♪ You put the Peeps in the chili pot ♪ ♪ And eat them both up ♪
♪ You put the Peeps in the chili pot ♪ ♪ And add the M&Ms ♪ ♪ You put the Peeps in the chili pot ♪ ♪ And it makes it taste bad ♪

[clears throat]

I'm gonna eat all this chili... and/or die trying. Anyone want any? I'm just gonna put it right down here. Come on. Dip your paws in my chili. Scoop your little mittens right in the stew.

(Student) - Professor, I can see that you're going through something, but exams are next week, so can you teach us anything?

(Chidi) - All right, nerd. You want to learn something? I'll teach you something. I'm gonna teach you the meaning of life. How do you like them apples? Now, over the last 2500 years, Western philosophers have formed three main theories on how to live an ethical life.
Now, first off, there's virtue ethics. Aristotle believed that there were certain virtues of mind and character, like courage or generosity, and you should try to develop yourself in accordance with those virtues.

(Tahani) - The gift will be anonymous.

(Chidi) - Next, there's consequentialism. The basis for judgment about whether something is right or wrong stems from the consequences of that action. How much utility, or good, did it accomplish versus how much pain, or bad.

And finally, there's deontology, the school of thought that there are strict rules and duties that everyone must adhere to in a functioning society. Being ethical is simply identifying and obeying those duties and following those rules. But here's the thing, my little chili babies, all three of those theories are hot, stinky cat dookie.

The true meaning of life, the actual ethical system that you should all follow is nihilism. The world is empty. There is no point to anything, and you're just gonna die. So do whatever.

And now I'm gonna eat my marshmallow-candy chili in silence, and you all can jump up your own butts.

(Another student) - Is that gonna be on the test?

(Chidi) - Yes. And, no. And you all get As or Fs. And there is no test. And you all failed it, and you all got As. Who cares? Good-bye. - [students murmuring] - Good-byyyyye.

(Eleanor) - Cool lecture. And cooler shirt. Feeling all right?

(Chidi) - I feel fine.

(Eleanor) - Hmm.

(Chidi) - I do have a stomachache. Why do I always have a stomachache?

(Eleanor) - Well, you just ate pounds of chili, bro. This one's on you. Look, I know the future seems bleak. But I have a plan. Come with me. No, ah, ah, leave that chili, weirdo.

Références

Comment citer ce cours ?

RSE DD – Enjeux éthiques et interdisciplinarité – Comprendre et appliquer l'éthique dans les affaires – Samuel MERCIER, AUNEGe (<http://auneg.fr>), CC – BY NC ND (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/>).

Cette œuvre est mise à disposition dans le respect de la législation française protégeant le droit d'auteur, selon les termes du contrat de licence Creative Commons Attribution - Pas d'Utilisation Commerciale - Pas de Modification 4.0 International (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/4.0/>). En cas de conflit entre la législation française et les termes de ce contrat de licence, la clause non conforme à la législation française est réputée non écrite. Si la clause constitue un